"ARTICLES DE PARIS."
The Paris correspondent of the London Times discourses of the small wares at the Exhibition as follows:

"One of the chief characteristics of the article de Paris is that, whether it be necessary or unnecessary, it plays upon the fancy and comes to us in strange disguises. It is not enough that you should have an ink-bottle on your table; it is above all things necessary that this ink-bottle should appear to be something else. It is a cannon ball—it is a pound weight—it is a negro's head—it is a railway engine. You take the negro by his black, woolly hair; you find that his skull opens on a hinge; and there is a pot of ink behind his brains should be. So there is a store of ink in the heart of the cannon ball, in the pound weight, and in the boiler of the engine. The play of fancy which is allowed in this way is boundless. Mr. Harry Kimmel has in silver a railway locomotive, with tender attached. The locomotive contains whiskey, the tender hot water, sugar takes the place of coal upon the tender, and the stoker is converted into a silver sugar-tongs. If you see a silver drum upon a friend's table, it is a riddle; and you must guess what it is. It may be anything from a match-box to a mustard-pot."

"A most notable model of an umbrella stand with an umbrella, a walking stick and a whip in it. The umbrella is a pen holder, the walking stick is a pencil, the riding whip is a penholder. Here is a silver gilt coal scuttle with a coal scupper in it; you are expected to use it for a coal scupper. Here is a little hat box; it is intended for matches. Here is a silver cove with a large fly on her back; you seize the fly, and find that it is the handle of a small lid upon the back of the cove. The animal is hollow; she is intended for a cream jug, and the cream pours out of her mouth. Here is a large ivory; it is a nutmeg grater. Here is a small ivory coffee-mill; it is a yard measure. Here is a tiddle; it is a toothpick. Here it is a beehive; it is a box of bonbons. Here is a clock; it is the pannel of a jolly farmer."

"In these fanciful designs the French are more prolific, and, on the whole, happier than the English are, but they sometimes make sad blunders. Thus they have a fancy just now for making umbrella handles of rhinoceros horn, but this horn is cut into the appearance of a chain; it is a chain, however, which denies its own nature, for it is quite stiff, the links not being loose. You expect an umbrella handle to be solid in your grasp; the handle of rhinoceros horn offers itself to you as apparently a loose chain, and in reality it has nothing whatever of the nature of a chain, except the appearance."

"The chief centres for the manufacture of articles de Paris are Paris, Vienna and London. What they make best in Paris are small bronzes, little boxes of enamel, or earthenware, and of inlaid woods. In the way of bronzes I have not observed a great deal that is either very new or particularly good. You see the same old figures that you have known for years past, of horses, dogs, deer, cocks and hens, rabbits, rats, ducks, geese, doing service in connection with paper-weights, clocks, match-boxes, sand trays, pen-trays, and other accessories of a writing table or a chimney are still unequalled. They have a wonderful sympathy with that extravagant passion of the human soul for small boxes and receptacles. They have boxes for everything—for gloves, for jewels, for handkerchiefs, for stamps, for bonbons, for pens, for wafers, &c."

STEALING A FUNERAL.

A few days since a black man named Wm. George Cooper, who has been made a citizen and voter, lost a friend by death. The members of the family, except Wm. George, were in favor of a fine coffin and a moderate burial in the country where they lived; but William George, wanting to have a first-class funeral, came to this city and bargained with Mr. Lamb, the undertaker, for a walnut coffin, with silver handles to it, a hearse, and a sufficient number of coaches to make a display commensurate with his views. The transaction was to be "strictly for cash," and William George assured Mr. Lamb that the money would be forthcoming, as he was proprietor of a farm and owned a horse worth $200. Everything was to be done splendidly; he had plenty of money; was proprietor of a farm for which he paid $75 a year, and had a horse worth $200. The funeral was furnished as desired; the coffin was sent out in a hearse; the coaches went out, and the drivers all wore hat bands. The bill was sent by one of the drivers, who presented it to Cooper. It had a stamp on it, and was receipted; and Cooper took it and put it in his pocket, but didn't give the driver the money. After waiting a short time, the driver insisted on having either the money or the bill, and it was with great difficulty he got the latter. Cooper said there was plenty of money in the house, and would pay it when he came to town; that he was waiting for his horse then to ride in. He had no horse, and never had one. The driver left, and Mr. Lamb saw nothing of him until Friday, when he had him arrested.

His Honor, after hearing the testimony, said he had been in public life for forty years, and this was the first instance in which he had known any one to attempt to cheat an undertaker of a funeral. He sent the accused on to be indicted for obtaining goods under false pretences, and committing him to jail.—Rich. Examiner.

THE MADEIRA VINTAGE.

We learn from the Journal of Commerce that owing to the decline of the vineyards it was supposed that Madeira wines had disappeared. The grape culture, however, has been successfully renewed and good sound wines are now reproduced in increased quantity and improved quality. It is said that this year's production will be a wine superior to that hitherto produced, which is attributed to the disappearance of a disease from the vineyards.

NOTICE TO THE PUBLIC.

Without making a useless harangue, I will say to my friends and the public that I am now prepared to supply all of their wants in the way of STOVES. It is time lost to undertake to look for anything better than can be found in my store. I have something new in the way of HEATING STOVES, which cannot be surpassed in style, or beauty of design. To one of us I will say that whatever I sell I warrant to answer the purpose I sold it for. I therefore invite my country friends to call and examine my stock of COOKING and HEATING STOVES before purchasing elsewhere, confident that they will not go away displeased. I would also encourage amongst my stock a fine lot of TIN WARE, of my own manufacture, and made by very experienced workmen; also, TINNED SAFES, PRESERVING KETTLES, Fruit Cans, Fine Japanese and Planished Ware and Chamber Sets, to which I would call the attention of the public. Golden Urns, Tea Urns, Waffle Irons, Children's Toys, and a fine lot of Block Tin Ware and other articles which are too numerous to mention.
